

At some configurations, robot will not be able to move toward the desired frame, so that when trying to solve it with NR, robot will move away from a configuration rather than moving toward the desired frame. And also, when robot moves closer to the singularity points, robot will be difficult to move in some direction, hence it will make the robot difficult to converge for a starting configuration that is far away from its desired one.